Five Groups Take Honors At Fourth Annual All Sing

Five clubs and organizations were announced winners at the fourth annual All Sing April 2 in the Women's Physical Education Building on the University of Tennessee Martin Branch campus and were presented trophies.

The winning groups were Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, Main Men's Residence Hall, junior class, Chi Omega sorority and the Home Economics Chapter.

Alpha Gamma Rho captured the trophy for the fraternity division by their rendition of "Old Oaken Bucket," "Listen to the Mocking Bird" and "Steal Away." The AGR's, under the direction of Robert Wright, added variety to their performance by whistling to the tune of "Listen to the Mocking Bird."

The Main Men's Residence Hall through their singing of "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen" and "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho" won the judges vote for the trophy for the dormitory division. This group, through the direction of Ronald Pratt, used action in their appearance. "Wanderin'" and "Shenandoah" sung by the junior class won first place in the clubs division to capture the All-Sing trophy. The junior class, under the direction of student Louise Penny, were attired in blue shirts with black slacks or skirts.

Chi Omega sorority with their presentation of "Dixie," "Lorena" and "Bonnie Blue Flag" won the judges approval for the trophy of the sorority division. The group, with Judy Wright as student director, appeared in grey dresses with red trimming.

The Home Economics Chapter, under the direction of Glenda Booker, captured the trophy for the clubs division with "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair" and "Beautiful Dreamer." The group was properly attired in night gowns.

Serving as master of ceremonies was Jim Pounders, minister of the Church of Christ of Martin. Besides announcing the competing groups, he entertained the audience by his amusing jokes.

Entertainment between divisions was presented by the U-T Medical Units Glee Club; Robert Todd, a member of the English Department at UTMB; The Choralairs, UTMB vocal group, and Douglas Biggs, organist from Martin.

David Sammons served as chairman of All Sing with the theme "Music of the 1800's" for 1965.

The proceeds from All Sing will help to finance a scholarship for a freshman.

New Campus Roads Are Being Planned

Plans are now under way for the construction of new roads and sidewalks on the campus of The University of Tennessee Martin Branch, according to Vice President Paul Meek.

Current plans include paving of the gravel drive from Dean Smith's residence to the bookstore by the beginning of fall quarter with a sidewalk being built alongside the drive. Also, Lovelace Avenue will be paved and widened on the east side of the new student apartments to be completed.

Additional roads and sidewalks are planned after the completion of the construction of other proposed buildings on the UTMB campus, Vice President Meek said yesterday.

'Platters' Tickets Are Now On Sale

Tickets for the performance of The Platters, internationally known vocal group, are now on sale and can be purchased, Larry Bates, All Students Association president, said yesterday.

Jerry Russell, a member of the ASA Council, has been appointed chairman of the sale of tickets, Mr. Bates said.

The Platters are currently engaged in a tour of colleges in the United States and after completion they will appear in the Far East, South America and Europe.

Their records continue to be strong on the best seller lists and the welcome and packed house hasn't changed since they were first organized ten years ago.

The quintet is known throughout the world and are still unspoiled enough to count their blessings, outstanding among them their private audience with the late Pope Pius XII in the Vatican, a critic said.

The Platters hit success with their rendition of "Only You" which was followed by "The Great Pretender" and "You've Got the Magic Touch." The Platters are the possessors of nine Gold Records and have a million seller album still on the selling list - "Encore of Golden Hits" by Mercury.

"All students are urged to buy their tickets before there is a sell-out," Mr. Bates added.

UTMB Is Seeking 21 New Courses

Twenty-one upper division Liberal Arts courses have been submitted to the Dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Knoxville, according to Dr. Norman Campbell, dean of instruction at The University of Tennessee Martin Branch.

These courses, which must be channeled through the department committee and the university committee on curricula, include five in chemistry, seven in sociology, three in history, three in French and three in Spanish.

If all of these are authorized, this will enable us to offer a chemistry major in the B.S. curriculum, and a minor in sociology, French and Spanish as well as a wider course selection for upper division students, Dr. Campbell said.

"These courses have been discussed with departmental chairmen at Knoxville, and we have every reason to hope they will be approved," he added.

This Russian film, he said, concerns a young Russian soldier during the second World War who gets a three day leave to go to his home and the problems which he has along the way. The soldier is serving on the front line and on his way home he meets a girl and falls in love and the plot concerns other people that he meets and problems he encounters.

Letter To Editor

On the University of Tennessee Martin Branch campus at the present time there is not a great amount of tradition since the school is still quite young. Consequently, the signs in front of each building bear strictly a utilitarian message. However, since UTMB is expanding and increasing in maturity, perhaps it would be possible to initiate the practice followed in most colleges and universities of dedicating new buildings on campus to some outstanding individual.

Specifically, I would like to suggest to the UTMB student body and faculty that the new men's dorm now under construction be dedicated to the late President John F. Kennedy. Thereafter, "Kennedy Hall" would serve as a memorial to the tremendous enthusiasm and interest that he expressed in the young adults of UTMB and the nation.

Sincerely yours,
Alec Bridges

Cleat Men Cannot Afford Luxury Of Spring Fever

BY ALLEN GARVERICK

Now that spring is here, everyone is looking to the outdoors -- and noticeably fewer students' are found in the dorm at any one time. Spring fever is starting to hit the campus and it is hard to get down to the work at hand.

Yet there is one group on campus that is working very hard this spring. Spring football practice is here, and the team is hard at work getting the fundamentals down pat and working already for a successful football season next year. Football is a year round job. In the fall, the regular season is in progress and the team is quite busy. Then during the winter, activity slacks off somewhat with weightlifting and conditioning taking place three afternoons a week. Spring practice comes with the beginning of the third quarter of the year. Then in the summer, while almost everyone is sunning on the beach or relaxing in front of the T.V., these same men are running and getting into shape for the season to start again. They may be getting a "free ride" through school, but they are paying for it. It would not be too hard to find a job that pays more than the amount they receive for the time spent playing.

I've often heard the remark "There goes a bunch of cleats." They always seem to be in a group. This testifies to the closeness of the Volunteer Lodge. But the players must be close to each other. They live, study, eat, and play together. They are in close contact months out of the year. You can always be sure that the players will stick together. Even the new players are now established in the dorm. One can tell by their actions that they enjoy being in school here, both in association with other students and the faculty.

Another remark I've always heard, or always seems to be the opinion of most is that "every cleat is a big dumb ox," yet the football dumb has had the highest scholastic average of the men's dorms over the past several years. This is a pretty large accomplishment considering they devote an average of at least 3 hours a day to football during the season. Then when they come off the field most are generally too tired to really be able to study effectively. Players learn to accept responsibility and discipline themselves--both off and on the field. Some of the lessons learned on the field can be gotten nowhere else. They learn to think for themselves and think fast.

Some people seem to be disturbed about the actions or gruffness of the players. It should be remembered that all should not be judged by the actions of a few. It can be seen also that it is hard sometimes for a player to have a double personality--that is hitting and tackling as hard in practice as possible, even if he does hurt his roommate, and then come off the field and cheerfully greet everyone he meets through bruises and headaches, especially after everything didn't go just right in practice. Still, most students will notice that the players generally greet them as they pass. It may also be noted that two members of the team are studying for the ministry.

These boys may appear to be different from the regular college guy, but they are all here on the UTMB campus for one reason and that is to help the school in any way.

Waller Attends Photog Conclave

Noel Waller, The University of Tennessee Martin Branch photographer, is attending the fourth annual national conference of the University Photographers Association April 7-9.

On display during the conference at the University Center is an exhibition of work done by UPA members during the year. The prints will be judged by a panel of critics for UPA Honor Awards and selection for the exclusive 40 prints which each year become the association's traveling exhibit.

No Matter What Country, Eggs Characterize Easter

BY VICKI PRINCE

Easter is here again, bringing with it the Easter rabbit, chocolate bunnies, and gay, unpredictable Easter bonnets. Yet there is one custom that is universal to the Easter season, and that is brightly-colored eggs.

All over the world eggs are symbolizing the advent of the Easter season. In France, the children wait impatiently for the chimes of church bells to bring their eggs; in Italy, tables are set with egg centerpieces; in Hungary, the boys sprinkle the girls with perfumed water and receive an egg as a reward. In many countries egg-rolling is popular especially in Germany where the one who collects the most eggs wins as a prize the nice round figure of 101 eggs. Egg-rolling is popular in our own country because of the White House egg-rolling which was first initiated by President Hayes in 1879.

The customs of the United States are similar in many ways to those of other countries, but the only original idea is that of the Easter parade. This lack of originality is due to the fact that Easter was not celebrated in this country until Civil War times, and then it was only a tribute to the war dead.

Because of this late start toward Easter traditions we have had to borrow customs, but somehow we missed some of the best customs other countries had to offer such as bull-fights, beating parents with Lenten birches, and washing feet (which certainly wouldn't hurt any of us).

In each country, the traditions are unique and in some they are combined with other seasons -- for example, in England groups of women catch men, toss them into the air three times, sprinkle them with water, and receive a kiss; or, in some sections, if a woman can catch a man and tie him up, she receives money before she lets him go (sounds like a good deal, girls). In the Netherlands, customs are combined for the children go around carolling and "trick or treating" for eggs.

Customs vary and people differ, "but, where there are eggs, there are mothers fussing over messes made with dyes, fathers 'helping' children color their eggs by doing it all by themselves 'just like when I was a kid,'" and most important of all there are very happy Easters.

Six UTMB Students Get Assistantships

Assistantships to study at The University of Tennessee Knoxville have been awarded to six students from The University of Tennessee Martin Branch, Dr. Norman Campbell, head of the Liberal Arts Department, said yesterday.

Other students will probably receive assistantships later but these are the ones that I know of now, Dr. Campbell said. Charles Harding, George Shankle, Larry Speight, Marita Moseman, Ruth Campbell and Ellen Webb have all accepted assistantships at Knoxville.

Larry Speight, seniors in liberal arts, have accepted assistantships in zoology.

Ruth Campbell, senior in liberal arts, has accepted an assistantship in English.

Ellen Webb, senior in education, has received the National Science Foundation assistantship as trainee in mathematics at U-T.

George Shankle, a graduate of UTMB, who is at the University of Minnesota on an assistantship in chemistry, has accepted an assistantship in chemistry at U-T.

Charles Harding, a graduate of UTMB and now serving as assistant laboratory instructor, has accepted a teaching assistantship in chemistry.

The assistantships are for one year of work on graduate programs. The students will assist with the duties in each department.

Over-all objectives of the fund raising campaign, sponsored by the Estes Kefauver Memorial Foundation, Inc., tax-exempt organization, are fourfold. They are:

Larsen Compiling New Alumni List

Lewis Larsen, alumni and placement director at The University of Tennessee Martin Branch, is compiling a new mailing list of all alumni of UTMB as far back as the beginning of Hall Moody Junior College.

According to Mr. Larsen, the main purpose of this mailing list is to allow the University to inform the alumni about what their former alma mater is doing. He would like alumni who are in close contact with UTMB to send in information concerning the addresses of any former alumni of the university.

An appeal is being made to parents of all alumni concerning the whereabouts of their sons and daughters. More than 1000 letters have been sent out to parents of alumni, and Mr. Larsen says that the response of the parents has been wonderful. There are about 1100 more letters yet to be sent out, Mr. Larsen said.
